Hydro One will give a boost to Algonquin College's electrical technician and electrical engineering technology programs with a $750,000 pledge during a recognition ceremony on Tuesday, November 10. Also during this event, Robert Gillett, President of Algonquin College, will present Hydro One with a certificate of appreciation and rename the college's electrical technician lab to recognize this contribution.

In 2007, Algonquin College signed an agreement with Hydro One to attract students into the electrical transmission and distribution utility sector in an effort to continue to address the skilled trades shortage in this industry. For more information, please visit: www.algonquincollege.com/hydroone
